It was an earnest plea for all to improve their friendship with Almighty God. Benediction of the blessed sacrament was given by Fr. Fitzmaurice.

THE EVANGELISTIC CAMPAIGN. Week Started Off Shape on Tuesday.

The third week of the evangelistic campaign at the First Baptist church started off in fine shape Tuesday night. Owing to the splendid results achieved last Sunday, the interest was intense and enthusiasm was great. Evangelist Linden spoke on the subject The Cure for Doubt and Unbelief or Unbelief Annihilated. The text from which his thought was taken was John 7: 17, in which Jesus speaks as follows: "If any man will do His will, he shall know of the doctrine whether it be of God, or whether I speak of myself." Here Jesus shows the place of man's willing faculty in salvation. He points out definitely and specifically that we are to do God's will and then we shall know the things that may The third week of the evangelisti we shall know the things that may now be hidden in doubt and gloom. At the close of the sermon Evangelist Linden gave an invitation and a number of persons, young and old, responded.

William M. Williams, who is now in his ninetieth year, has decided, much to the regret of his associates, to give up active business on April 1 and remove from Norwich to Westerly, R. I. Mr. Williams at present has supervision of all incoming merchandise of The Eaton Chase Co., checking invoices and routing the goods as they are received from transportation companies to the various departments in the store. He has been employed in the same firm for over 60 years. His career has been a busy and eventful one and a few facts will serve to call to mind the interesting history of localities where Mr. Williams formerly resided.

William M. Williams was born in Ledyard August 6, 1827. Ledyard was at that time a part of the town of Groton. He was the son of Prentice Williams and when seven years old his father moved to Montville and located on a farm on Raymond Hill near Gardner Lake on the old Essex turn-his employment in the hardware business was sent out on the road taking orders and making deliveries to distant points. He made regular trips to Essex, Colchester, Mystic, Westerly and New London. One of his best customers was the Colchester Wheel Co., until that concern had cut down and worked up all the best bickors and don to secure employment on one of the whaling vessels that then put into that port.

At this time there were 78 ships, brigs and other vessels registering from New London and the tonnage exceeded any other port in the United States, with the possible exception of New Bedford. Mr. Williams was enthused with the stories of the marvelous yoyages made by these vessels, some of which had sailed around the globe. However, a day in the harbor convinced him that he was more at home with a team of horses than with the nautical appliances and he took the friendly advice of a captain and crossed the ferry to Groton.

Here he found employment much to his liking with Landford Rockwell, the hotel keeper of the village, who in addition the hotel keeper of the village, who in addition the hotel keeper of the village, who in addition the state which the hotel keeper of the village, who in addition the state which the hotel keeper of the village, who in addition to the state which the hotel keeper of the village, who in addition to the state which the state was the state which the state was the til that concern had cut down and worked up all the best hickory and oak timber in that vicinity.

Mr. Williams took an active interest in city affairs. He was foreman of the first steamer in the city and afterwards became chief of the fire department. The Falls steamer was named after him. Many are the parades of the fire department that he headed in a stove pipe hat and there were reviewed by Governor Bucklingham and other notables. He was also chosen alderman and placed on many important committees. Breed Hall was operated by him for the Breed estate for many years.

Here he found employment much to his liking with Landlord Rockwell, the hotel keeper of the villinge, who in addition to his hotel business was conducting a line of stages along the coast. One of these stage lines, carried the mail from New London to Stonington Point. Mr. Williams was engaged to drive the stage over the route, which he did daily for three years. During this time he became acquainted with Charles P. Williams of Stonington, president of the Ocean Bank of Stonington, who later took an active interest in the building of the Providence and Stonington railroad and also Mr. Williams had business relations with Charles Mallory president of the Mystic River bank. One of Mr. Williams' duties was to transfer large amounts of currency to and from these banks for collection or redemption by the Suffolk Bank of Boston. His quick wit and fearlessness saved these banks from loss many times when roadmen were organized to hold up the stage which conveyed the money.

In 1851, Mr. Williams decided to go

He went by steamship transportation, taking another steamship on the other side. During this trip across the Isthmus he saw the most wonderful spectacle he had ever witnessed. This was a Spanish religious representation of the crucifixion of Christ. An immense building was devoted to the object and a long incline led to the top where the spectacle could be observed. Mr. Williams and others in his ship's company were forced by an armed soldier to kneel before entering the building, then they passed on to a platform where an image of Christ was shown, hanging to a cross made of rough logs. The image yas covered with solid gold casing and was fastened to the cross by ship's spikes. The attitude and expression on the face of the image impressed him deeply and he was profoundly affected by the whole spectacie.

Mr. Williams reached San Francisco by the steamship Golden Gate and proceeded to Sacramento. He was met on the wharf by a man named Gallup who held in his hands a picture of Mr. Williams and a letter from Charles P. Williams and a letter from Charles P. Williams as soon as he put foot on shore.

Mr. Gallup was engaged in supplying the miners with necessities and had a large number of horses and teams which took the merchandise from Sacramento to the mining camps. Mr. Williams was placed in charge of transportation. He packed the goods went on long trips of delivery and returned with gold dust. The trip to Mt. Shasta was 200 miles and took 21 days. "Shad scale" was accepted by him as $1800 per ounce and gold dust with slight impurities was worth $16 in exchange for merchandise.

After three years life in California Mr. Williams yearned again for Connecticut and he salled for home, arriving in Mystic just as a new steamboat was being completed for the Sound traffic. He was offered the command of this boat by George Greenman of Mystic, the builder. He went to New London, qualified before Inspector Daboll and began his steamboating career at once. His daily trips along the shore in the old stage coach gave him necessary experience to navigate the boat which was called the "Ella" was put on the route from Norwich to Westerly in opposition to the "Tiger Lily." The older boat was charging 75c a round trip. Competition soon reduced the rates and finally Capt. Williams advertised to take passengers anywhere between Norwich and Stonington Point for a nickel. The boat was run on the Bay of Nicaragua and the company made a handsome profit by the sale if they did not on the receipts
